A Few Very Simple, Plain, Straightforward Words About The Macy Clothing Business.

People who know all about it, find some amusement reading the advertising of certain dealers who attempt to justify the high prices they ask by cleverly exalting the quality of the Clothing they sell -- exalting it in type by claims that may impose upon the credulous, but which appear absurd to all who are familiar with the

Stripped down to its pith, they say: "Our Clothing is superior to others, and, of course, we ask more for it, because it is worth more."

Likelier than not you'll find exactly the same goods, from the same makers, on our counters, at a quarter or a third less.

We don't say that our Clothing is better than the Clothing sold by other good, reliable stores, but our plea for your preference is based on price. The best that is made for less than others charge. That's our principle-and we hew to it.
